Albert Einstein said that imagination was more important than knowledge. In my opinion, that means that people should pay attention not only to educate themselves as "smart" people, but also they should grow up as personalities with individual imagination and abilities.

I think that Albert Einstein was right. Firstly, people nowadays forget about imagination. They want to get a high-paying job and not to do "extra" work. Secondly, imagination can make everything better. People who concentrate only on education missed chances to try different types of activity.

In my life was an episode where my imagination helped me. I needed to do a project about anything what I could create. I could not find interesting idea for project because I was thinking only about school themes I wanted to show my knowledge but they were not enough. Then I decided to use my imagination and personal feelings and I drew a beautiful picture and successfully created project. Everything changed after that story I started use my imagination usually and my life become more interesting and exciting.

In conclusion I want to say that everyone decides what is more important for him or she in their lives. Knowledge can make your life easy and understandable, but imagination shows you another side of your life more interesting and colorful.

Albert Einstein said: "Imagination is more important than knowledge". How I understand it? I think that Albert Einstein wanted to say us that you can not know a lot, but if you have an amazing imagination you can achieve a lot. Imagination, tacit abilities are better than knowledge and intelligence in opinion of Albert Einstein. If you have perfect imagination you may do tasks originally. Imagination help you in life, provides an opportunity to cope with difficulties without resorting to theoretical knowledge.

I support the position of A. Einstein. In my opinion, imagination and unique thinking are incredibly useful. Thanks to them, a person can easily achieve great heights in any area. A lot of famous scientists, actors, writers have succeeded not only thanks to their skills and knowledge, but also thanks to outstanding abilities, creative and original thinking, well-developed imagination.

Well-developed imagination, creative thinking helps to stand out, discover and create new things. All ~~the~~ things that we have now - books, paintings, computers - once they were just an idea, but now they are familiar things that have appeared thanks to the talent and perseverance of the creators. In other words, if the creators did not have a good imagination, they would not be able to come up with such important and useful things. (12)

In conclusion, I want to say that Albert Einstein was absolutely right in saying the importance of imagination and that knowledge is not as important as it might seem.

In that quote Albert Einstein wanted to tell us, that the lack of imagination much harder to set fill than the lack of knowledge. Everyone has an ability to study and gain experience in solving different problems, but not all of them will find the brand new solutions. Only people with good imagination will able to do that.

I agree with Albert Einstein, because I think, that the imagination — the best friend of genius. A man, who has only knowledge, is called a talent. It's very hard, almost impossible, to develop your imagination. All of the scientist want to have good imagination. Lev Landau, a very famous Russian physicist, is an example. He was able to solve integrals in the age of thirteen. But Landau once said, that he was worried about his lack of the imagination. I don't remember the exact quote, but I will try to save the meaning: "I can solve problems faster than anyone, but I don't have enough imagination." Lev Landau, who won the Nobel Prize, had the same opinion with Albert Einstein, who also won the Nobel. Also the great example, is "Victor Frankenstein from Mary Shelley's novel, Frankenstein, or the modern Prometheus." His imagination helped to discover a way create life.

We agreed with Albert Einstein's quote about the meaning of imagination and proved it with our own examples from literature and background knowledge.

A good imagination is not given for everyone, but if you have it you are happier than you think. Even if you don't know an ^{exact} information you can think of it and find a decision, everything depends on you.

In my opinion, imagination is really essential for us. First of all, you may easily solve problems and find interesting decisions. Secondly, this personal quality is a plus for you as a worker. All bosses appreciate people with an imagination, because their projects are unusual. Also, they have more productivity and motivation, because the imagination increases a desire to work.

It is not difficult to illustrate that imagination is more important than knowledge. We just need to look around. At school not everyone has good marks, so that is why some of students are trying to increase their results by cheating, for example. They don't want to learn anything, but also they don't want to get bad marks, so they need to replace their lack of knowledge by imagination. Students try to find out ways to get rid of problems with studying and, later, with a family.

In conclusion, I would like to say, that it is not important how much you know, this information can be unuseful for you, but the lack of imagination may become a real problem for you, your career and life.
