Article

It's ~~definet~~ obvious that films can influence attitudes. We can watch and observe character's path, opinions, harsh reality that they face. We worry about them as they were our friends and relatives. We always look up to them. Moreover, it's so interesting to be able to see different perspectives of life. 50

My favourite film is "Legally Blonde". The main character is really smart and determined. We can see how she evolves during the film. The plot is simple. A man broke up with a girl. He said that she wasn't ^{smart} enough for him. He needed to focus on studies. He couldn't help it but he didn't want to continue relationships with a "dumb blonde girl". Obviously, she became really pathetic afterwards. But her friends were there to comfort her. She decided to go to the Harvard Law School. She just wanted to prove her ex. She isn't just a "stupid blonde girl" but an intelligent woman. 106

This film shows us where can discipline and really strong personality lead us. It shows that other's opinions are meaningless. At first she was being laughed at but then she found her support. 33

The "Legally blonde" is ~~one of~~ my the most favourite film. I like the set and reinforce. Also, I learnt to ignore what other people say about me. I learnt to keep on even if it's hard. Moreover, I learnt that I shouldn't follow people who don't even think about me or my feelings. 52

In conclusion, I would say that people need films like "Legally Blonde". It's funny and interesting to watch. But still it can motivate people to push forward and try something new. All girls should remember that they're important and bright, that their appearance shouldn't influence their personality. Overall, "Legally Blonde" is easy, interesting film to watch with your girl's friend group. It is a must-have for sleepovers and motivation for ~~stead~~ learning. Just like "Mean Girls". But "Mean Girls" I will allegedly keep for my next week article. 24

Stay with me to read more articles about films. Thanks for attention!
